

XIV

Seeing double: Clinton spokesperson confirms Daily News analysis that Secretary of State is wearing glasses to correct vision problems after concussion and blood clot

A close inspection of Hillary Clinton's glasses worn during her Wednesday testimony on Benghazi shows an adhesive Fresnel prism, which is usually used to 'bring things into focus' for those with double vision or muscle weakness in the eye. A Clinton spokesperson confirmed that the new specs are related to her head trauma.

BY TINA MOORE / NEW YORK DAILY NEWS / Thursday, January 24, 2013, 11:16 PM

A A A

injury.

UHDVHG#WRUHV

With Obama's new term, Hillary Clinton leaves 20-year political legacy

Hillary Clinton testifies in front of Congress on Benghazi attack

Transcript of Hillary Clinton's testimony on Benghazi attack

Hillary Clinton released from hospital after concussion

Closeups of Secretary of State Clinton taken during her Senate testimony Wednesday revealed that her head injury last month left her with lingering vision problems.

As she testified about the Sept. 11 attack on the U.S. Consulate in Libya, the secretary of state appeared to have tiny vertical lines etched onto the left lens of her new brown specs.

Clinton's spokesman confirmed Thursday night she is wearing the special glasses as a result of the fall and concussion she suffered last month, but he did not elaborate.

Experts told the Daily News that Clinton likely has a Fresnel prism placed on her glasses. The adhesive panel is used to treat double vision.

"If she's wearing a Fresnel prism, then she has double vision without it," said Dr. Mark Fromer, medical director of Fromer Eye Centers.

HGURU#ENV

Ex-Brooklyn DA admits to detaining witnesses

In a sworn deposition, former Brooklyn District Attorney Charles Hynes admitted that material

Assemblyman plans bill to keep carriage-horse industry

Assemblyman Gary Pretlow (D-Westchester) plans to introduce legislation Friday

'A Day Late and a Dollar Short,' TV review

Terry McMillan's "A Day Late and a Dollar Short" plays like one of those stories you tell your kids to

Upper West Side cops will try to 'talk the walk' to jaywalking pedestrians

Upper West Side police at the center of a crackdown on jaywalking will stop

In the Now: Designers dress up makeup with MAC line

It's hard to swing a Proenza Schouler shoulder bag in New York without hitting a die-hard fan of the

Nas' hip-hop classic gets the documentary treatment in "Time Is Illmatic"

The film is a reminder of the New York of the crack-infested 1980s and the

Queens College's shuttle bus plan may cost all co-eds

They're on board. Wheels are in motion at Queens College to get straphangers at the commuter-based

Kate Middleton is the Duchess of Sales

Kate Middleton set off a fashion frenzy around the world by stepping out Thursday in a $325 Diane von Furstenberg wrap

'Orphan Black,' TV review

Season two of BBC America's "Orphan Black" immediately becomes far more menacing than season one. For the clones, that's a

Morgan insists she's got things on the move

Bankrupt "Real Housewife of New York" Sonja Morgan is so upset that Confidenti@l found out she's renting her E. 63rd St. townhouse, while planning to relocate to a more humble property nearby, that she's

