

NEWS

Clinton mistakenly refers to Trump as her 'husband'

By Daniel Halper

August 5, 2016 | 1:39pm

Hillary Clinton nearly called her rival Donald Trump her "husband" before quickly correcting herself and saying Trump was her "opponent."

The embarrassing gaffe came as she addressed the National Association of Black Journalists and the National Association of Hispanic Journalists on Friday in Washington, DC.

As Clinton detailed her policy proposals to the assembled journalists, some were applauding.

Speaking to black and Hispanic journalist associations, Clinton is drawing applause for her policy proposals.

— Byron Tau \(@ByronTau\) August 5, 2016

"Journalists have a special responsibility to our democracy in a time like this," Clinton said at the event.

She also said she would work vigorously for immigration reform, hoping that Republicans would end the roadblocks when her victory sends "a clear message to our Republican friends."

"There's nothing like winning to change minds," she added.

FILED UNDER 2016 PRESIDENTIAL ELECTION, DONALD TRUMP, HILLARY CLINTON