Breonna Taylor rented a car in 2016 that was used by her then-boyfriend, Jamarcus Glover. In December 2016, Fernandez Bowman was found dead in the car. He had been shot eight times.

Taylor, 26, was shot dead inside of her home by Louisville Metro Police Department Officer Myles Cosgrove on March 13, 2020, when he and officers Brett Hankison and Jonathan Mattingly opened fire while executing a search warrant. In September 2020, a grand jury failed to indict the three officers for their roles in Taylor's death.

The 2016 incident involving Taylor's rental car has been widely reported, and there are no reports that suggest Taylor was involved or was suspected of involvement in Bowman's death.

Glover was the main focus of the police warrant that led to Taylor's death. The man Taylor was with on the night she died was her boyfriend, Kenneth Walker. Walker was not named in the criminal investigation into Glover, according to a Washington Post column that fact-checked the events surrounding Taylor's death.
